INVENTORY HOLDING FEE FOR CUSTOMERS

Please be advised that effective immediately, we are unable hold inventory for longer than 2 weeks after the acknowledged ship date. The only exception is if a Blanket Purchase Agreement is in place.

To ensure smooth operations and fair access to our products for all customers, any items not shipped within this timeframe will be subject to an additional storage fee or, if the item was a stock item, will be returned to stock.

An additional storage fee(s) will be $25 per day that the item sits in open inventory past the ship date it was acknowledged at.

Holding inventory prevents several challenges as a manufacturer such as:

1. Limited warehouse capacity means space used to hold unclaimed inventory could be used for active production materials or new orders. It leads to inefficient use of space and potential delays in fulfilling other customer orders.
2. Inventory that sits idle ties up working capital. Delays in customer pickup cause invoicing and payment to be pushed back, affecting cash flow and the ability to reinvest in our operations.
3. Risk of warranty terms being inaccurately dated
4. Causes operational inefficiency as holding inventory increases handling, tracking, and management workload. It increases the chances of inventory errors, misplaced items, or unnecessary complexity in logistics.
5. Extended holding periods can create a culture of dependency, where the manufacturer is expected to absorb the burden.

We appreciate your understanding and cooperation. If you have any questions or need assistance with scheduling, please don't hesitate to contact us.
